INTRODUCTION

The mission of transcultural nursing is to provide culturally congruent/competent care to people worldwide by expanding the body of knowledge of transcultural nursing to under gird research, education, administration and practice. Leininger defined transcultural nursing as: “a formal area of study and practice focused on comparative human-care (caring differences and similarities of the beliefs, values and patterned life ways of cultures in order to provide culturally congruent, meaningful and beneficial health care to people.)” In addition to this broad definition, other resources can also provide the stimulus for the development of various transcultural nursing and health care approaches, models, frameworks and theories. Leininger’s Culture Care Diversity and Universality is the first theory of nursing to focus upon transcultural nursing. Advancement of transcultural nursing and health care is linked to beliefs, values and practices about leadership. Creative leadership is the capacity to provide ways to advance transcultural nursing through imaginative and pragmatic opportunities that are directed toward transformation of clinical and community contexts so that health, well-being and illness care in all cultures can be realized.

These By-laws have been established through the cumulative work of members of the Board of Trustees of the Transcultural Nursing Society (TCNS). The By-laws promulgate the purposes, general practices, and policies of the TCNS that serve as a framework for all members. The By-laws outline the Society’s mission, ways to promote and advance its goals and purposes, and enable members to become active, informed participants in achieving the purposes of the Society.

Transcultural Nursing Society, Inc. is subsequently referred to as the "Corporation."
